Vanderbilt University Divinity School Announces the 2016 Mafoi Carlisle Bogitsh Memorial Lecture

Islamic Saints

and Hindu Daughters

Kinship, Ethical Self-Fashioning, and Inter-Religious Relations at Firoz Shah Kotla Dargah, Delhi

TO BE DELIVERED BY
Anand V. Taneja
Assistant Professor of Religious Studies, Islamic Traditions of South Asia, at Vanderbilt University

The Mafoi Carlisle Bogitsh Memorial Lecture was established by a gift from Professor Emeritus Burton Bogitsh and his family in honor of Mafoi Carlisle Bogitsh. Mafoi Carlisle Bogitsh grew up as a Baptist in a small farming community in west Texas, where her mother Una Hooper Carlisle, taught her the principle of religious tolerance. Mafoi studied comparative religion at Baylor University and cultivated a profound interest in various world religions and the cultures from which they arose. This interest grew when she married Burton, a man of Jewish heritage, and both involved themselves with the Unitarian tradition. The Mafoi Carlisle Bogitsh Memorial Lecture honors Mafoi’s lifelong interest in the interplay between culture and religious expression.
