Workshop on Organizations, Work, and Labor

The Workshop on Organizations, Work, and Labor (OWL) is a space for faculty and students to discuss their work-in-progress on organizations, work, and labor. OWL addresses the reproduction and dismantling of social hierarchies, and the reconstitution of just, egalitarian, and healthy communities, in and around economic organizations, spaces, networks, and labor markets. OWL meets approximately three times per semester, online or in person, to discuss the work-in-progress of workshop participants and occasionally hosts an outside speaker. Work-in-progress includes faculty research projects; graduate student masters theses, dissertation proposals, doctoral dissertations, and practice job talks; and undergraduate student immersion projects and honors theses.

Participating OWL Faculty

Bruce Barry
Dan Cornfield, Workshop Coordinator
Rachel Donnelly
Alexandre Frenette
Larry Isaac
Lucie Kalousová
Josh Murray
Ranga Ramanujam
Mariano Sana
Lijun Song
Timothy Vogus